HEAVY GALES HIT EASTERN CANADA-U.S.

Storm Tears Way Along Atlantic Seaboard; Damage Heavy

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 25.—High wind, causing a tide of rain from seven to eight feet, played havoc along the waterfront to day, particularly on the Dartmouth side of the harbor. The government merchant marine steamer Canadian Scottish, at anchor above Imperial, dragged both her anchors and started on a wild voyage up the harbor, imperilling shipping in its path and threatening serious damage to itself.

The large vessel, travelling light with no cargo, was at the mercy of the sea and tugs straining to hold fast to secure her, but fortunately, her anchor caught and terminated her exciting but harmless excursion.

High waves took a railroad track, up a steep hill and into the street of Dartmouth. Wharves along the waterfront were covered by the waves, which even mounted the breakwater at Pier 23 and continued on Pier 20.

Relief Plane's Fate Still a Mystery

ROBERTVILL, Que., Jan. 25.—It was not known today whether the Fairchild company's relief plane, which left Grandpré on Sunday for Lake Champlain, had been seen by the Duke-Prince company's Quibler, and Inspector Hodgkinson of the Hudson's Bay company, who, in company with C. Saunders, pilot of an inspection hydroplane, owned by the Fairchild company, were forced down on a small lake in the neighborhood of Lake Champlain last week, had reached its destination.

THE PLOUGHMAN POET

At a thousand banquet boards tonight, scattered over all continents and climes, the common and the uncommon of Scotland will gather to do honor to a ploughman who wrote poetry.

Burns' banquets are not more numerous than the claims advanced for his admirers for commemoration of his natal day. Perhaps none of these claims come nearer to accounting for the undying popularity of the bard than the fact that he wrote real poetry in language which could be understood. He put in rhyme what multitudes feel.

AFTER DINNER SPEECHES

Rear Admiral Plunkett, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, has been telling the people of the United States and its commercial competitors that he will spend a billion dollars in building the biggest navy on the seas. War, he said, is "inevitable" between the United States and its commercial competitors. He wrote real poetry in language which could be understood. He put in rhyme what multitudes feel.

The Admiral made his speech at a dinner in New York. Canadian readers will recall that twenty odd years ago there was a General, commandant of the Canadian military forces, who made a speech at a dinner in Montreal, in which he undertook to tell the Government and people of Canada what kind of an army they needed, and why. The General seemed very shortly to have taken position on the military organization or the payroll of Canada. What follows the post-prandial deliverance of the commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard will be interesting and perhaps also significant.

LOWER RATES HELP SOME

The Railway Commission last summer made a drastic cut in the railway freight rates on grain moving by rail from the head of the lakes to Atlantic ports. The undigested object was to retain to Canadian routes as much as possible of the heavy percentage of the western crop which has been going every year to ports in the eastern States.

How far the reduced rates will go to accomplish that object it will not be possible to judge with accuracy until spring, since movement by rail only began to get close to late navigation. But the movement in December was encouraging. During the first week of the month 58,151 bushels had been sent to the National Transcontinental to Quebec, and the volume grew steadily until in the final week the figure was 69,000 bushels.

These figures are small in comparison with the total amount of grain sent to be moved, and in comparison with the enormous tonnage which, former years, had made their way to New England ports. But they represent a good many train loads of what, except for what went to Canada, would have been idle in mid-winter, and a proportionate benefit to Canadian shipping interests at Quebec or other eastern ports.

PARLIAMENT

There have been no indications that the session of Parliament which opens tomorrow will be notable on account of any outstanding pieces of legislation or of new departures in public policy. Rather the expectation is that it will be a business session, devoted mainly to routine matters of the House of Commons.

The change of the terminus of the Hudson Bay railway from Nelson to Churchill will be explained as a matter of course. The decision will be challenged, it is fairly probable, in view of the convincing reasons therefor which are set out in the report of the consulting engineer.

The St. Lawrence Waterways scheme will probably get an airing. That anything further will be done about it is not likely. The questions involved are important, in more ways than one and will stand a good deal of consideration before the country is tied up to the undertaking. So far as the decision in the present case is concerned, it is said that public opinion has been growing in favor of the proposal as an international project.

The state of trade hardly provides ground for prolonged or serious controversy. Canada had a favorable balance at the end of the year amounting to $12,000,000. While the state of the trade for the preceding year by $130,000,000, the difference is accounted for in ways which do not indicate a check in the flow of property or call for legislative action.

The national finances are in good shape, with another surplus in sight, and a possible further reduction in taxation is fairly probable that any reduction granted will be by way of lowering the sales tax, an impost which bears alike on rich and poor and tends to hamper and curtail trade.

People in this province will hope for something in the way of a definite announcement of plans for the opening up and development of the Peace River country. The Government is definitely pledged to make that region the magnet for drawing immigration. That can only be done by a program including the solution of the railway tangle and providing for supplying a full measure of transportation facilities. It is time that such a program were announced.

Whether anything will be done in respect to the control of the natural resources of Alberta is doubtful. The decision of the Privy Council leaves that question as it stood. That is the Province may either accept the resources on the terms offered, or may appeal on the ground that the terms are improper and illegal. In either event it is at Edmonton, not at Ottawa, that action seems to be in order.

A Cold Day

By EDGAR E. GUEST

There's no standing on the corners by the side of the road.

For the wind is cold and bitter and it's blown them away.

When the mercury falls to zero there are few to stare about.

It's the workers of the city and the youngsters who are out.

Now the crowds today are missing, every passer-by you'll meet.

Is hurrying to his business and he swings along the street.

And he hasn't time for mischief or for nonsense or for crime.

For the idlers and the loafers need the softer summer time.

When the wind is blowing bitter it's the brave hearts and the stout.

And the workers of the city that are hurrying about.

Red of cheek I watch them swinging to their task whatever they be.

Braving winter for a purpose and the goal ahead they see.

And in spring the streets are crowded and in summer time they fall.

Every corner has its idlers, but when winter purses to seal.

And the mercury falls to zero then the streets are cleared.

For there's no one to brave bitter weather but the worker with a dream.

Law or Revenge

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

The other day a woman shot and killed a man who had wronged her daughter.

The murder charge was dismissed, the official verdict being that she was acting in self-defense.

It is hard to condemn the woman, and most of us think that the man, if the circumstances are as alleged, was deserving of his fate.

We all have done about the same thing. It is hard to condemn the woman, and most of us think that the man, if the circumstances are as alleged, was deserving of his fate.

At the same time if the man's offense was as heinous as the woman's, it is hard to condemn the woman, and most of us think that the man, if the circumstances are as alleged, was deserving of his fate.

She took the law in her own hands, constituted herself a judge, jury and executioner, and meted out the death penalty. This is contrary to all our notions of law.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, who addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

A STUDY OF CHRONIC RHEUMATISM
For some time physicians have been trying to discover the use of the word "rheumatism." They prefer to classify the different forms of the disease as "rheumatic fever," "rheumatic arthritis," "rheumatic neuritis," "rheumatic myositis," etc. As far as the layman is concerned, it is just as well to make the simple classification of "acute rheumatic fever" and "chronic rheumatism."

In the case of chronic rheumatism the area of inflammation is always around the joints, either in the cartilage and bone covering, or in the synovial membrane and pericardial tissue. When the joints are so affected, the patient is usually known as an "arthritis deformans," which simply means deformity of the joints.

The majority of cases of chronic rheumatism occur between the ages of twenty and fifty; only about five per cent under the age of twenty. Whenever arthritis does appear during childhood or adolescence, it is a great deal more serious and more difficult to eradicate.

The first signs of chronic rheumatism are usually noticed in some of the joints of the fingers, and this gradually extends to the wrist, elbow, and shoulder. It may take several months before any inflammation has developed so that one can be sure he is acquiring rheumatism.

In most cases rheumatism is the result of an infection of the blood, and as for a time before settling down into its chronic stage. There will finally be a noticeable swelling of the joints and when this occurs the patient is usually known as an "arthritis deformans," which simply means deformity of the joints.

If the cause of rheumatism is not removed, there may be such an inflammation in the joints of the fingers and the patient will be unable to move his fingers. When arthritis has been allowed to continue, it often settles in the spine, and when this happens the patient is in a very helpless condition and makes a great deal of difficulty in bringing about any relief.

The development of chronic rheumatism is usually slow, and the patient has plenty of time to eliminate the cause before the disease has progressed sufficiently for the vertebrae of the spine to be affected.

Chronic rheumatism may be cured at the start, but is more difficult as each new joint is involved.

THE CANARY MURDER CASE

BY S.S. VAN DINE AUTHOR OF THE DENSON MURDER CASE

"She said everything was all right and told him to go home and not worry."

CHARACTERS

PHIL VANCE, John F. A. Markham, District Attorney, New York County.
MARGARET ODELL, the "Canary".
CHARLES, a man-about-town.
KENETH SPOTSWOOD, a manufacturer.
LUTIS MANNA, an importer.
DR. AMBROSE LINDQUEST, a fashionable neurologist.
TONY SKEEL, a professional bar-telephone operator.
WILLIAM EMERY JESUP, telephone operator.
HARRY SPITVELL, telephone operator.
ERNEST HEATH, sergeant of the House of Burgoyne.

THE STORY THIS FAR

The bolt to the side door of the building had been secured at six o'clock, the evening before, and was still locked the next morning. The janitor of the apartment house where Margaret Odell was found strangled, that morning, was very positive. So the murderer, declared Heath, must have used the front entrance and passed the telephone operator. The operator relates that the "Canary" had come in late, a gentleman a few minutes past eleven of the night before. "Now wait till you hear the rest of his story," says Heath.

CHAPTER IX

"He went in with Miss Odell, and stayed about half an hour," Jessup said. Markham's eyes brightened, and there was a suppressed eagerness in his next words: "Then he arrived about eleven, and was with Miss Odell in his apartment until about half past eleven. You're sure of these facts?" "Yes, sir," correct, the man affirmed. Markham pushed and leaned forward. "Now, Jessup, think carefully before answering: did any one else call on Miss Odell at any time last night?" "No one," the man answered, looking up. "And don't you ever leave the switchboard?" "No, sir," the man answered him vigorously as if protesting against the implication that he would desert a post of duty. "When I want a drink of water, or go to the toilet, I use the little lavatory in the reception-room; but I always hold the door open and keep my eye on the switchboard in case the pilot-light should show up for a telephone call. Nobody could sneak down the hall even if I was in the lavatory, without my seeing them."

One could well believe that the constabulary Jessup kept his eye at all times on the switchboard, and should have seen the man who answered. The man's earnestness and reliability were obvious, and there was no doubt in any of our minds. I think that Miss Odell had another visitor that night. Jessup would have known of it.

But Heath, with the thoroughness of a nature, now quick and steady, his eyes attentively on the district attorney, awaiting any further questions that might be asked him. There was something both admirable and confidence-inspiring in the way he answered.

"What's that?" Markham asked, and Heath not up at all. "Tell me every detail of that call."

Jessup consulted intentionally. "About twenty minutes," he said, "a man came in from the board, and when I answered it, he asked for Miss Odell. I plugged the connection through, and after a short talk the man came."

"What's that?" Markham asked, and Heath not up at all. "Tell me every detail of that call."

WHEAT SHOWS SHARP DROP

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—(Special.)—The wheat market today was characterized by a sharp drop in prices. The decline was due to a combination of factors, including a heavy export of wheat from the United States and a general weakening of the market. The price of No. 1 Northern wheat fell from 125¢ to 120¢ per bushel. Other grades of wheat also showed a decline, with No. 2 Northern falling from 120¢ to 115¢ and No. 3 from 115¢ to 110¢. The drop was particularly sharp in the early part of the day, when prices fell as much as 5¢ per bushel. By the close of the day, the market had somewhat recovered, but prices remained well below the opening levels.

Montreal Stocks

CLOSING STOCK LETTER

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—(Special.)—The Montreal stock market today was characterized by a general decline in prices. The decline was due to a combination of factors, including a heavy export of wheat from the United States and a general weakening of the market. The price of No. 1 Northern wheat fell from 125¢ to 120¢ per bushel. Other grades of wheat also showed a decline, with No. 2 Northern falling from 120¢ to 115¢ and No. 3 from 115¢ to 110¢. The drop was particularly sharp in the early part of the day, when prices fell as much as 5¢ per bushel. By the close of the day, the market had somewhat recovered, but prices remained well below the opening levels.
